The Why, Where and How of Collecting Perfume Bottles and Vanity Items

WHY:
 Perfume bottle collecting is a very personal adventure. The variation in perfume bottles is similar in material, style, shape and original use. Each bottle added to one's collection contributes information to the never-ending story of fragrances, their containers, and their use. Related items, such as ephemera (paper, history, advertisements), vanity items (powder containers, liner holders), purses and associated items (compacts, solid perfumes, lipsticks, mirrors).

WHERE:
 Perfume bottles turn up in the most likely and unlikely places: antique shops, eBay and other internet websites, flea markets, attics, basements and thrift shops. The entire global community is now at your fingertips via your connection to the wonderful world-wide-web!

HOW:
 Each collector decides which perfume bottles or related items ignite such intense feelings of joy and desire that they must simply be acquired and treasured. How to collect is a very personal experience!

Joining the IPBA will:

- Help you start and/or build your collection.
- Provide you with knowledge of perfume bottle and vanity collectibles available nowhere else.
- Put you in touch with many others that share your special interests, such as: Victorian, Early American and European glass, French and American Commercial, Art Nouveau, Art Deco, Atomizers, Czechoslovakian, Art Glass, Novelties, Figurals, and Contemporary.
- Provide you with information to help you identify and value your collection.
- Bring you together with the most knowledgeable collectors and dealers in the field.
- Add to your library of important reference and research material.

This excellent and highly informative, 32-page, full color, magazine-style publication features news of perfume bottles and related items, people, literature reviews, trade events, rare and unusual items, advertisers, Association news, and more. The PBQ is the essential tool to staying current on collecting, events, research, and people.

The Annual Directory

Listing members alphabetically and geographically along with their collecting interests, the Directory will help you keep in touch with members across the globe.

IPBA Annual Convention

The most exciting event in perfume bottle collecting brings together dealers and collectors from around the world. The IPBA convention includes educational seminars, presentations, expert identification, and a countless array of perfume bottles — ranging from a few dollars to thousands of dollars — in a variety of sales venues. Highlighting the convention is the world's premier exhibition and sale staged by the field's leading dealers AND the largest US perfume bottle auction with high quality bottles and vanity items in every price range.

The IPBA Website: perfumbottles.org

The website hosts a Virtual Museum of member bottles across all specialty groups. It also provides convention and membership information, a PBQ article bibliography, and useful links for the collector. There is also a "Members Only" section for more topics and information that is unavailable to the general public. The calendar of events encourages members to explore upcoming and exciting happenings in the perfume bottle collecting world.
